This film is an intimate and poignant portrait of Carson's life as she emerges as America's most successful advocate for the nature world, beautifully shot in HD by Oscar-winning cinematographer Haskell Wexler at Carson's cottage on the coast of Maine.

Leading a discussion prior to the film will be biologist and artist Caryn Babaian and librarian and BCCC faculty member Brian Johnstone.

They will be discussing the life and philosophy of Rachel Carson, how the role of nature writing and creative thinking were a part of Carson's ecological knowledge and legacy and nature writing as advocacy.

Nature writing plays an essential role in educating, informing, and instilling appreciation for nature in the minds of those who read it. It is an effective tool, as successfully demonstrated by Rachel Carson, for advocating stewardship, responsibility, and care of our planet.

Q & A will follow the film.
